From Penny To Anna
Subject A family memory

Hi Anna,

Great to hear from you! Yes, we had a fantastic holiday. Mum, Dad and I went camping in Beidaihe. In fact, we stayed at the same campsite as we did ten years ago. Dad showed me a photo we had taken then – just see how time flies!

Dad has changed quite a bit! In his thirties, he was quite thin and pale, and he had red, bushy hair. Nowadays, he's well-built and tanned. He's always had a square jaw, but now he's grown a beard. Strangely, his beard is still red even though his hair is turning grey!

Mum looks almost the same, though. She still has smooth skin and straight black hair, and jogging has kept her slim and fit.

I still have light skin and black hair, of course. But I usually wear my hair in a ponytail these days as it has got a lot longer. Mum says I had cute rosy cheeks, but now I have freckles. I think they are kind of cute too, right?

Can't wait to see you back in school!

Penny

Like Father, Like Son

1 Tick the things you would ask your parents about for advice.

- ☐ school studies
- ☐ friendship troubles
- ☐ joining an after-school club
- ☐ getting a new hairstyle
- ☐ shopping for new clothes and shoes
- ☐ choosing your future area of study

2 Read the play and find out what conflict the son has with his father.

Saying sorry to family members

The International Day of Families, which was set by the United Nations in 1993, is held on 15 May every year. The day celebrates the importance of families. It aims to deepen people's understanding of issues that are related to families. With a different theme each year, the day is observed with a wide range of events that are organised at local, national and international levels.

Saturday 22 September

Today, I was in a(n) school play but Mum missed it ☹. Later, on the phone she apologised and explained that she was busy with work because someone was off sick. I wish she had come!

I know she's been busy recently, and I understand that. I'm just worried about her. I don't like seeing her so tired and pale.

I think she needs to take some time off work to relax.

I told her my worries. To make up for it, next week we plan to go to the countryside together. We'll go camping and have a(n) picnic. Most importantly, we'll have time to talk and catch up. I'm really looking forward to it!

Sunday 20 October

I was tidying my room yesterday and found an old photo in a notebook. As I was looking at it, the lovely memory of that day came back to me.

It was my mother's birthday ten years ago, and I decided to surprise her with home-made scrambled eggs. I woke up really early and tip-toed to the kitchen. I had never cooked anything before, so I tried to copy how she did it. But somehow they ended up burnt.

I was about to throw everything away when my mother came in. I showed her the eggs and sadly explained what happened. To my surprise, she tasted them and said they weren't bad! I guess love is indeed a magical ingredient. In fact, we ended up laughing and ate them all.

This weekend is her 45th birthday. I'll make her scrambled eggs again, and this time they won't be burnt!

Project

Planning an itinerary for a family day out

Even when members of a family all live under one roof, each member is often busy with their own daily life. A family day out is an opportunity to put aside work, school and other commitments and spend quality time together.

Investigate

- 1 Work in groups. Think about different types of family day out.
 - visiting a museum
 - going on a bike ride
 - playing games in the park
 - exploring a national park
